What Does "Cow Bill" Mean to You

Alberta Government Prepared to Give Every Settler a Chance to Live

Will Back the Farmers' Notes for Money to Buy Live Stock with Which to go into the Cattle Business

Five Years to Repay the Loan and Only Six per cent to pay for Money

Minister of Agriculture Believes New System will Make Alberta Greatest Live Stock Country in the World—No More Lost Time for Homesteader in This Province

That the settler who goes into the farming business with insufficient capital is condemned to waste the early years of his pioneering whereas, with capital at his command, he might otherwise become a producer from the first day and add something to his own and the country's wealth every month of the year, is the practical condition which the Government of Alberta grappled with and undertook to solve when it passed the "Cow Bill" at the recent session of the legislature.

Everyone who has had opportunity to observe the homesteading and settlement business in Alberta knows that there are few homesteaders and settlers who have the financial capacity to stock themselves with cattle and establish a herd at the outset of their farming operations, and everyone knows that there are few—very few—settlers who, if given this opportunity, would fail to put themselves on an independent footing in a very few years through the natural increase of cattle if they had the nucleus of a herd. Without a few cattle to start in with the settler is compelled to go out and work for others for a part of the time during the first few years while he is settling established, or he must work at great disadvantage and suffer considerable privation which would not be suffered if he had a few cows.

The "Cow Bill" is intended to get him the cattle on terms which will give him a chance to become a wealth-producer from the first day, and give him something to go along on while he is breaking up his land and getting established as a farmer. For the older settlers, who already have a considerable area broken up but who have no stock, it is a particularly advantageous bill, as it gives them an opportunity to stock up at once and turn to a profit a large part of their production which otherwise would be waste.

To state it briefly, the Government guarantees the farmers loans to the extent of $500 each for stock purchases; makes an arrangement by which the loans can be discounted at the bank at 6 per cent, and gives the farmer five years in which to repay the money, but reserves the right to call the loan at any time the farmer fails to protect his own and the country's interest by neglecting to take care of his cattle.

The "Cow Bill" is a brief and business-like bill, written in simple language which anyone can understand, and setting out very plainly what the Government proposes to do. If you have not already a copy of the bill send to the Live Stock Branch of the Department of Agriculture in Edmonton and get one at once. It may mean something to you; possibly it may mean the difference between success and failure, between independence and foreclosure, on that homestead of yours.

In the outset it provides that any five farmers, or more, may band themselves into an association for the purpose of taking advantage of the "Cow Bill." Having arrived at an understanding among themselves that each of them is willing to go on a joint note for the purpose of raising money to buy live stock the association notifies the Live Stock Commissioner in Edmonton, or any local deputy commissioner, of their intention to come under the act and borrow money for live stock purchases. The commissioner takes the matter up with any individual or corporation who has money to lend, usually with a bank, and makes the arrangement by which the lender looks into the standing and genuineness of the members of the association applying for the loan. If on examination, they are found to be genuine settlers who are in the farming business with the intention of becoming permanent settlers the commissioner notifies the lender of the maximum amount the Government is prepared to guarantee as a loan to the association. The lender takes the joint note of the association, forwards it to the Live Stock Department in Edmonton, gets it stamped with the Government's guarantee, which makes it as good as gold, and places the amount of the note in some chartered bank most convenient for the operations of the settlers who form the association. There is a fee of $1.00 on each hundred dollars borrowed, intended to cover the postage and such incidental expenses as may be incurred in putting through the loan, and this $1.00 per hundred the settler pays at the time of turning in the loan for discount.

The Live Stock Commissioner is the judge of how much, up to $500 each settler will be allowed to borrow. Because an application has been made by five farmers for $500 each it does not necessarily follow that the commissioner will be willing to extend to all of them the maximum credit; but, generally speaking, it is to be expected that he will recommend the total amount so long as the settler looks like an industrious and conscientious man who is a good moral risk.

With the government's guarantee stamped upon the note, the lender, having been called upon to deposit the amount of the loan in the bank, and the commissioner having notified each settler what proportion of the money he has applied for will be lent to him, the association is then in shape to commence buying cattle. According to the provisions of the act the cattle bought must be cows or two-year-old heifers. The money is to be paid out by cheque. The settler himself does the buying, but his purchases are subject to the approval of the commissioner. So long as the price is reasonable and the cattle are all right the commissioner may be depended upon to give his approval. Money for the payment of the purchase price of the cattle is paid out by cheque, the cheque to be signed by the commissioner as well as by the purchaser. The cattle, as well as the offspring, are branded so that they may be identified at any time in case they go astray and as a protection to the other four members of the association should one member attempt to put anything over by selling his cattle.

According to the act the cattle are not to be sold, but remain, in effect, the property of the province until the loan has been discharged. Mortgages given against them would be so much waste paper, as they do not really belong to the settler until paid for. But, except for the $500 and the 6 per cent interest, the Government asks nothing for the guarantee except that the farmer takes good care of his stock. The commissioner may, and will, give consent to the sale of the male offspring of the herd when they reach two years old, and this is the source from which it is presumed that the farmer will derive the money which will eventually pay the note. Also, the commissioner may consent to certain animals being sold so long as the farmer makes good for the particular animal by putting another one acceptable over.

Pte. H. G. Robinson Killed in Action

Pte. Harry G. Robinson is among the latest reported killed in action, but no further particulars have as yet been received here. He enlisted among the first from Gleichen and saw all the hard fighting. He was formerly employed by Chris. Bartsch and when Mr. Bartsch told him at the ranch that recruiting officers were in town for volunteers he threw down his lines and said: "I am off to do my share". He was a fine young fellow and all who knew him regret to hear he has followed so many of our brave soldier boys and met the supreme sacrifice.

Harry was one of the boys Mr. Bartsch sent his huge cakes to for Christmas, but his went astray on the way.

Cluny Red Cross Dance Clears $100.00

The Cluny Red Cross dance held in May 11th proved a decided success, over $100 clear of all expenses being realized.

The roads were in a very good condition for motoring and a very fine night helped considerably in bringing out the crowd. There were a good number of Gleichen people there and every one had a good time and thoroughly enjoyed the splendid music supplied by Mrs. Traill and Mr. Bailey.

We wish to thank Mr. Ramsay of the Busy Store for a donation of $10 cheque which was auctioned off by Mr. McArthur and was sold for $15 to Mr. Goss of the Union bank staff.

We also wish to thank Mr. Ramsay and Mr. Millie for the use of a large number of flags which were used to good advantage in decorating the school.

Altogether we think the Cluny Red Cross has reason to be quite proud of its first dance and as we said once before when the Cluny ladies do anything they do it right.

A little more sunshine now, Mr. Weatherman.

able to the commissioner in this place.

At the end of five years the loan must all be paid. In the meantime the farmer is richer by the natural increase, and by whatever dairy products he has received from the herd bought with the $500.

The $500 costs the farmer $30 a year, or $2.50 a month. If he cannot make this much out of five cows or ten heifers and pay back the original capital at the end of the five years out of the increase, with a snug little profit to himself, then he is not a very good farmer, and he should try something else. The Government of Alberta is just sporty enough to believe that they can all do it; that the country is rich enough, and that the farmers, settlers, and homesteaders are sincere enough and honest enough that money lent to them is just as safe as though piled up in gold in the treasury, and the Government is going to back that bet by giving every bona fide settler and farmer a chance to get on his feet within the next five years and become the owner of a herd.

Duncan Marshall, the minister of agriculture, who has given the matter great study, is certain that with this system of assistance to farmers in operation for the next five years this province will be the greatest cattle country in the world. What do you think about it yourself?

Get a copy of the Act and read it over.

Three Candidates Now Seek Election

The election for a man to represent the Gleichen constituency in the Alberta Legislature promises to be very interesting and quite likely exciting before the votes are all counted on June 7th, as there are three candidates in the field soliciting the votes of dear people—ladies and gentlemen, this time, if you please. But there is one excellent feature, the agony of suspense for the candidates and elector will be of short duration.

As usual the CALL is not taking a side in the election, believing it best to allow all the candidates an opportunity to use our columns as they desire to the limit of our space and the ability of our staff to do the necessary work. Our only part will be to see no mud-slinging is indulged in, and we are happy so say we believe all three candidates are gentlemen away above anything of that nature. So we hope for a fair and square fight, and who may guess what the result of a three-cornered scrap will be?

John P. McArthur is the Liberal candidate, and known to one and all as the man that has twice been honored by the electors of this constituency. He needs no introduction and with Premier Sifton will give an account of his stewardship in the Gleichen Opera House within the next week.

Fred Davis was nominated some months ago as an independent candidate and claims the strong support of the Kersey U.F.A. of which he is a member, but he has some trouble with the Gleichen Union as it appears he refused to pledge himself to support a U.F.A. policy, and yet he says in a letter: "Let me say that all matters referred to in your platform that come before the Alberta Legislature will receive my support and influence if elected".

Previous to coming to Alberta he was mayor of Goderich, Ontario.

He will speak in Gleichen some evening next week.

J. W. Leedy is the standard-bearer for the Non-Partisan League and spoke in Gleichen on May 8th last in behalf of his party. He is an ex-governor of Kansas, but has been farming north of Edmonton about nine years past. It is expected he will be here again soon.

Craigantler Locals

On the night of the 15th a severe storm struck here. The wind was of extreme violence. Hundreds of dollars worth of damage being done by buildings being blown over.

The rain was very welcome and the prospects are fine for another good crop.

H. Furness had a letter from his brother in France who is with the Canadians. He was at the capture of Vimy Ridge where they took 12,000 prisoners and over 100 guns.

H. H. Ellis has purchased a new Sterling tractor and is breaking some new land.

Some of the people in the district had to move out of their houses and go to the neighbors for shelter the night of the storm.

"Leave it to me, sir," replied Hoskins. "If you'll excuse me, I'll give orders about the chickens and the room and then, perhaps, you'd like to examine the wines?"

The stranger dismissed Hoskins with a gracious wave of the hand, drank off his ale, lighted a cigar, and having looked about him walked into the kitchen garden. There he cast a knowing eye on such green things as promised well for the making of a Spring salad; he roamed from bed to bed, nodding his head with satisfaction; he murmured a few words of delight at the presence of garden peas and new potatoes; he was as well content as an epicure who is properly assured of his next meal can be when the landlord fetched him to inspect the wine cellar. In that cool and mystic recess he displayed the tastes and knowledge of a connoisseur; Hoskins presently felt these lower regions, reverently and carefully carrying certain bottles which contained his choicest vintages. In their midst he did not know his customer (from Adam, but that he was likely to prove an uncommonly profitable one, seeing that he thought nothing of ordering wine at twenty-five and thirty shillings a bottle.

"Ah, and who may the lady be that is going to help him to drink it?" enquired Mrs. Hoskins. "Looks like a secret lovers' meeting of some sort, at any rate."

"It's naught to do with us, Mrs. Hoskins, whether it's secret or public," replied the landlord. "So long as there's a nice little bill to hand in and good coin to meet it, I don't care what the occasion may be, nor who the lady is. All we've got to do is to give her every attention when she comes."

Nevertheless, Hoskins was not without a certain amount of curiosity as to the expected guest's arrival, and as the appointed hour drew near he hovered about the porch, wearing his best coat, and carrying a clean table-napkin in virtue of having elected himself to the office of waiter for the time being. That the lady was at hand Hoskins knew from the doings of the stranger, who, having lounged his time away in the garden, and inspected the room in which he was to entertain his visitor, had now strolled along one of the roads which cut off from the highway.

"Ah! coming from Ashminster direction, is she?" mused Hoskins. "A ten-mile drive, that, and naught much between it and us. And he came 'tother way, from Lydcaster, and that motor he had was from Jobling's place in Lydcaster—another ten-mile drive. Cert'nly there seems to be a good deal of mystery about these here proceedings—and maybe it is a secret meeting—and maybe—Hullo!"

Hoskins' sudden ejaculation was caused by the appearance of a motor car, which flashed round a curve of the narrow road in which the stranger was pacing, and at sight of him was quickly pulled up. The stranger swept off his Homburg hat in a professional bow, and bent his plump figure almost double as he approached the car, from which he at once assisted a tall and graceful lady, who appeared immediately to enter upon an animated and vivacious conversation. Presently the motor car was turned about and disappeared in the direction from which it had come; the stranger and the lady paced slowly towards the door of the "Fox and Hounds." And Mr. Hoskins, reasonably inquisitive, and reflecting that he was, after all, master of his own house and responsible for the respectability of all entrants, hastened to place himself in a certain nook wherefrom he could advantageously inspect the interesting visitor who was about to pass its portals.

Two minutes later the landlord went into the kitchen and winked at his wife.

"Maria!" he whispered, "I know who the lady is. It's Lord Hartsdale's sister—the Honorable Mrs. Tressingham. You know—her as used to be Miss Hilda, and married the Colonel. But—what's the gentleman?"

CHAPTER II Secret Orders

The lady to whom the mysterious gentleman assisted to alight in full view of the wayside inn had no sooner heard her chauffeur instructed and dismissed than she turned on her companion with an enquiry which was as inquisitive as it was eager.

"Otto!" she exclaimed, "What on earth possessed you to make an appointment at this place?"

"Good reasons, my dear lady," answered the gentleman. "First, I knew you were staying with your brother, the estimable Lord Hartsdale, at his country seat, which is, I fancy, only some fifteen miles away, and therefore within easy distance of this inn. Second, I remembered the existence of this inn, having breakfasted in it one morning some years ago. Third, I knew that at this time of the year we should be free from interruption and observation here. And—well, he said. So I asked you to meet me here—and we have met."

"Now, I invite you to lunch," remarked the lady, as they crossed the threshold of the porch.

"There will be bread, and there will be cheese. Also there will be—but we will not anticipate. Meanwhile—"

He led her into the comfortable and quiet apartment which he had himself chosen, and waved his hand comprehensively towards a table which was distinctly gay with spotless linen, polished glass, and bright silver. His companion laughed.

"Of course," she said. "You have been raising the resources. I might have known that whatever Otto von Roon found in a remote country corner, he would find food—and drink. Yes, I smell something distinctly appetising. And I see bottles with long necks."

Von Roon laughed too, and dropping into an easy chair with a lack of ceremony which argued an easy intimacy with his guest, put the tips of his fingers together, and looked over them at her with a critical and yet admiring inspection. Drayton, to her full height as she leisurely unpinned the flowing motor-veil from her hair, Hilda Tressingham made a distinct note of attractive womanhood. Tall, graceful, slender, she was the sort of woman who looks as well on foot as on horseback—a sure test. Her brown hair, worn in a great coil at the back of her shapely head, had a touch of gold in it; there was a touch of brown-gold in the gleam of her eyes.

Her eyes, as they met those of the man who had just entered the room, did not know his customer (from Adam, but that he was likely to prove an uncommonly profitable one, seeing that he thought nothing of ordering wine at twenty-five and thirty shillings a bottle.

"Ah, and who may the lady be that is going to help him to drink it?" enquired Mrs. Hoskins. "Looks like a secret lovers' meeting of some sort, at any rate."

Grace's uncle met her on the street one spring day and asked her whether she was going out with a picnic party from his school.

"No," replied his eight-year-old niece, "I ain't going."

"Sure, I can," responded Grace quite heartily. "There ain't nobody going."

British Women

Making Planes

Play Great Part in Manufacture of All Kinds of Aeroplanes

Women are now taking a large share in the industry which provides one of the greatest assets of the forces on land and sea, in the form of aeroplanes, war balloons, seaplanes, and other aerial scouts. Not only are they to be seen in those sections of the aircraft industry where their help might have been expected in pre-war times, such as in cutting out, sewing, painting and varnishing the fabric for aeroplane wings, but they are supplementing the men in the essential engineering operations. The most important part of an aeroplane—its heart, so to speak—is the engine, the construction of which calls for the utmost accuracy. Women are now entrusted with much of this work and are undertaking the milling of the top and the grinding of the inside of the engine cylinders, and they are also engaged on machining the connecting rods, the valves, the pistons, and the holding down bolts.

These processes are often carried out to an accuracy of half-a-thousandth of an inch, that is, to one-eighth of the thickness of an average human hair, a measurement which can only be gauged by the most ingeniously constructed instruments. Women are further employed in the acetone-welding process where conscientious and intelligent work is imperative, since upon the soundness of the joints depends the safety of the machine and the life of the flying man. Such services may be best offered by those of the educated class, whose previous experience fits them for dexterity of manipulation, keenness of observation, and accuracy of judgment.

When Courage Failed

The family was having guests to dinner, and six-year-old Edward had his supper alone and was sent to bed somewhat earlier than usual. The appetizing aroma of roast turkey, in which he lay awake pondering over his hard fate, and he decided to descend to the dining room and claim his rights.

But when father, beholding the small figure at the door, demanded sternly, "Well, sir, what do you want?" Edward, courage fell, and he answered apologetically, "I just came to see if you would lend me a bone when you're through with it."—Topeka State Journal.

"So it was a happy marriage?"

"I should say it was. The bride was happy, the bride's mother was blissful, the Count was in ecstasy, and I understand that his creditors are in a state of delicious joy."

U. S. Senator Makes Good On Saskatchewan Farm

Interesting Story of How Wealth Is Quickly Attained in Western Canada

Can a man start life over again at sixty, or thereabouts, and "make good" in a new occupation under strange conditions? That is the question former United States Senator Burnell of Massachusetts, found himself called upon to face when his physician told him he could no longer follow his life-career of railway man. How Senator Burnell answered that question reads like a romance, and may interest others who, with the best part of their life gone, find themselves confronted with broken health or financial circumstances that demand a radical change of profession.

Senator Burnell's story is told in a recent issue of "The Nor-West Farmer," an agricultural paper published at Winnipeg, Manitoba. He is one of many Americans who have not only found health and success on the broad fields of Western Canada, but are, by their own enterprise and culture, contributing to the country of their adoption those solid qualities which make for an enduring civilization. His story is well told in his own words:

"I am American born, the son of a farmer," said Mr. Burnell, "and it is strange how later in life one will turn again to the employment of his boyhood, particularly if forced to drop his life work as I was. I left the farm and took up railroading, and in 1869 was station agent in a small town in Maine. In 1876 I was transferred to a station in New Hampshire, where I remained 27 years. In 1900 and 1901 I was elected to represent my town in the state legislature at Concord, and in 1903 was elected as senator for the fifth senatorial district of New Hampshire. From 1903 till 1914 I was agent in a large city for a railroad in Massachusetts; the last fifteen months of my service I worked about 455 days without a rest, which brought on a complete nervous breakdown. My physician ordered absolute rest—to go on a chicken ranch or something like that in the country where it would be quiet and without nervous strain. But I had heard of the Canadian west and its broad wheat fields, and the idea of raising wheat appealed to me. I came to Saskatchewan, and purchased a half-section of C.P.R. land near Asquith and Dumfries stations on the C.P.R. and C.P.R., about twenty miles east of Saskatoon. I bought the property and took possession April 1st, 1914. My capital consisted of about $2,000 in cash. I purchased an outfit consisting of four good horses and such implements as were necessary, and broke 100 acres, getting it ready for cropping in 1915. The following year I rented another quarter and bought a new horse outfit, putting in two hundred and thirty acres of crop. I also broke one hundred acres more on my own place and got it ready for the 1916 crop. My crop in 1916 consisted of about two hundred acres all on my own place. The two crops I have raised totalled just about $10,000 to me. I have paid off all my indebtedness and have a good balance on hand. Outside of the half section with buildings and mostly all under cultivation I have ten good horses and all the machinery needed to farm my half section of land, including a threshing outfit. My salary on the railroad averaged from $20 per month at first to $100 per month at last; my crop this year netted me over $600 per month for the entire year's operations."

The West, and particularly Western Canada, is so often spoken of as the country of young men, that it is refreshing, particularly to those who have passed the half century mark, to learn that the age at which a man may make room for a younger officer for younger blood is not too old to start life anew on the prairies, with the prospect of not only material success but additional years of vigor and usefulness. The story of Senator Burnell can no doubt be duplicated in many other experiences. It stands out as a reminder that nature draws no age limit on a man so long as he has enterprise and courage.

Great Fleet For Danes

Eighty-five Danish ships have been sunk by the Germans during the war. Yet Denmark has now a total tonnage of 790,000, or 20,000 more than at the beginning of the war. Shipping dividends of from 50 to 100 per cent are not unusual in Denmark today, and numerous shipping stocks that could be bought at par for $1,000 once upon a time now cost from $10,000 to $20,000 and even more. Prices are not likely to go any higher, but, as in Norway, there is hardly any likelihood of a slump, for the disquieting—to a Scandinavian shipping stock owner—news of the great fleet of merchant ships being built secretly in German yards for post-war traffic is taken with a grain of salt by the big Scandinavian interests.

Agricultural Development In Western Canada

Western Canada's 1916 Crop Worth $439,000,000

The total value of the crop of Western Canada last year was $439,000,000, according to the official computation of the Canadian government. The progress of Western Canada during the past five years can be well illustrated by the fact that the acreage under cultivation in the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta increased from 17,130,000 in 1911 to 20,553,000 in 1916. The value of all field crops increased from $240,449,000 in 1911 to $439,820,000 in 1916.

It is also worthy of note that the acreage under crop to various kinds of fodder crops, including alfalfa, fodder corn, and the different varieties of hay, increased from 437,000 in 1915 to 464,000 in 1916—an increase of 27,000 acres in one year.

Chatham, Ont.—"Being a nurse I have had occasion to use Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription quite a lot. I always recommend it to my patients and it has been a wonderful help to many of them. I never knew of a case where it failed. I have a patient who is using it now and she is doing fine since taking it. I have taken it myself and got the very best results. I consider it the best medicine there is today for women who are ailing."

THAT WEAK BACK

Accompanied by pain here and there—extreme nervousness—sleeplessness—may be faint spells, chills or spasms—all are signals of distress for a woman. She may be growing from girlhood into womanhood—passing from womanhood to motherhood—or later suffering during middle life, which leaves so many wrecks of women. At any or all of these periods of a woman's life she should take a tonic and nerve prescriber for just such cases by a physician of vast experience in the diseases from which women suffer.

—Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has successfully treated more cases in the past 50 years than any other known remedy.

It can now be had in sugar-coated tablet form as well as in the liquid. Sold by medicine dealers or trial box by mail on receipt of 50 cents in stamps. Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Municipal Hospital Act

How to Incorporate a Hospital
District and Provide for the Operation of a Hospital

Under the Municipal Hospitals Act passed at the recent Session of the Legislature, the Minister of Municipal Affairs is authorized to divide the province into Hospital Districts. He is also charged with the responsibility of supplying, plans, specifications, estimates, advice on sights and management and such other assistance as he may be able to give. The bringing into existence of a hospital depends upon the initiative of the people. When only one municipality is concerned, all that is necessary to initiate action is a petition signed by twenty-five electors and agreed to by the municipal council. When more than one council is concerned the consent of the other council or councils is necessary, as well as the petition from the electors within the municipality. The preliminary work being done, the council shall appoint a hospital board. In the case of one municipality undertaking the work, the board shall consist of three members of the council. When there are two municipalities in the proposed district each council shall appoint three representatives, one being a member of the council and two electors, not councillors. When the appointments are made names are sent to the Minister names a convenor and the place and date of meeting for organization. The board has power—

To appoint such officials as may be necessary and to fix the amount of remuneration;

To determine the site and arrange for purchase of same;

To arrange for the acquiring or erection of a suitable building;

To make arrangements with any existing hospital, if preferred to undertake the establishment and maintenance of a separate institution;

To engage medical practitioners and nurses;

To arrange for financing the hospital, the preparation of estimates, the municipality providing the money as for other municipal enterprises.

The levy for capital expenditure shall not be higher than two mills on the dollar.

As soon as the plans are approved by the Minister of Municipal Affairs the council shall prepare a by-law for the submission to the electors, which must be voted on within three months.

For full information as to how to arrange for and conduct a municipal Hospital under this Act, apply to,

JOHN PERRIE,
Deputy Minister of Municipal Affairs, Edmonton. 12

BUY AN IRRIGATED FARM FROM THE CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY BECAUSE:

Irrigation makes the farmer independent of rainfall, and in sure good crops, not occasionally, but every year.

Irrigation makes possible the successful culture of alfalfa, the king of fodders, which insures good returns in dairying and mixed farming.

Irrigation means intensive farming and close settlement with all the advantages of a densely populated agricultural community.

Irrigation in the Canadian Pacific Railway Irrigation Block is no longer an experiment, the years that it has been tried having absolutely demonstrated its success wherever intelligently applied.

You can buy irrigated land from the Canadian Pacific Railway at prices up to $50 per acre, with 20 years to pay and the privilege of a loan of $2,000 for improvements

(6% interest); no principle after first payment until end of fourth year, reduced interest if settlement conditions are complied and no water rental for first year. Contract can be paid off before maturity if desired.

This is the most liberal offer of irrigated farm land on record. For full particulars apply to

A Yankee Who Was King

Truth Is Again Proved to Be More Strange Than Fiction

A monument was erected a few weeks ago to the memory of a dead monarch. It was just a simple pole, carved grotesquely and stuck in the ground like a fence post, but it represented a world of sentiment to those who raised it.

Strange as it may seem, the dead monarch to whom the honor had been paid by loyal subjects was a Yankee, a former sea captain who had imposed his welcome authority on a half civilized nation and had been accorded fealty in return.

"The dead monarch was formerly Capt. Welsbarth, adventurer, 'black-bird' and sailor, extraordinary," says the San Francisco Chronicle. "Forty years ago he went to San Francisco from Maine as mate in an American clipper ship. He reshipped for Australia and then into the South Seas on a trading expedition.

"Ten years later he came back with a belt full of gold and bought a saloon on the San Francisco waterfront. He presided behind the bar a year and then, tiring of a sedate life ashore, sold his saloon to his bartender for $10, and with the laconic remark, 'This is no life for a white man,' sailed as a passenger for Tahiti. There he outfitted a little sailing sloop for trading.

"Afterward, it was rumored, he became a 'black-bird' recruiting by doubtful means Polynesian natives for delivery to plantation owners in Hawaii and other islands. In 1890 he put into Tahiti, in the Gilbert group, and there he met 'Princess Teoti, daughter of the native chieftain. They fell in love and were married by tribal ceremony and later by a Christian missionary in Honolulu.

"Afterward Capt. Welsbarth quit black-birding and confined himself to trading. Until 15 years ago he made annual trips to San Francisco always accompanied by his wife. Then he quit roving and settled down in Honolulu.

"In 1914 his wife learned her father had died and that she had inherited the rulership of the island. The English, who had taken over the group in the meantime asked her to return to keep the natives pacified. Capt. Welsbarth built the little schooner Teoti—named for his wife—and they sailed for Tahiti. Mrs. Welsbarth became Queen Teoti and her husband was known as king.

"Early last month the little trading steamer Kestel put into Tahiti and learned that Capt. Welsbarth had died there a month earlier of fever. The natives erected a monument in his memory, which was placed beside others reared to their rulers for the last five centuries."

Snivelling Hypocrisy

All this clamor about the British ranny which, "indifferent to the war of humanity," insists upon "conquering its war of starvation," is snivelling hypocrisy. Starvation is legitimate measure from time immemorial, the most colossal example being that of the Southern Confederacy, which was literally starved into surrender by the Union blockade.

The German government in August, 1914, took a gambler's chance with fate, and lost. For two years now it has been waging a ruthless war upon neutrals as well as upon its own people in a desperate attempt to win a criminal autocracy from the unsequenced of its own infancy, and there will be no assurance of peace or anybody in this world until that autocracy is crushed.—New York World.

Pronunciation Bothers Him

How to pronounce the "Kut" in ut-el-Amanar—whether as cut or not—has long bothered many people. Sir Thomas Holdich says the Arabs of Mesopotamia call it "koot," the Indians "kote," and the people of alachistan "kwat." So there's another great war problem settled. But here's a chap figuring in the Russian evolution with a long row of consonants in his name that is bothering us now.—Ottawa Journal-Press.

A Reflection

"But, my dear lady, you should not flow your grief to overcome you, remember your husband is far happier in the other world."

"M—maybe he is, but I think you are exceedingly rude to say so."

The Lure of Bagdad

Bagdad's importance cannot be minimized. It has a future commensurate with its past, and it plays a part in the dream of things to come that more than equals the glory that is gone. When the German sailors on the Breslau and Goeben discarded their caps and donned the fez so that the attacks upon Russian ships would bring Turkey into the war, it was the lure of Bagdad and what lay beyond that actuated those high in German command. Bagdad was not the prize, but it was the symbol of German ambitions in this direction. It was, of all places in the sun, the spot most coveted by the dreamers of German world dominion.—Brooklyn Eagle.

SPRING IMPURITIES IN THE BLOOD

A Tonic Medicine Is a Necessity at This Season

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are an all year round tonic, blood-builder and nerve-restorer. But they are especially valuable in the spring, when the system is loaded with impurities as a result of the indoor life of the winter months. There is no other season when the blood is so much in need of purifying and enriching, and every dose of these pills helps to make new, rich, red blood. In the spring one feels weak and tired—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills give strength. In the spring the appetite is often poor—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills develop the appetite, tone the stomach and aid weak digestion. It is in the spring that poisons in the blood find an outlet in disfiguring pimples, eruptions and boils—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills speedily clear the skin because they go to the root of the trouble in the blood. In the spring anaemia, rheumatism, indigestion, neuralgia, erysipelas and many other troubles are most persistent because of poor, weak blood, and it is at this time when all nature takes on new life that the blood most seriously needs attention. Some people dose themselves with purgatives at this season, but these only further weaken themselves. A purgative merely gallops through the system, emptying the bowels, but it does not cure anything. On the other hand Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new blood which reaches every nerve and organ in the body, bringing new strength, new health and vigor to weak, easily tired men, women and children. Try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills this spring—they will not disappoint you.

A Tall Building

Tallest Building in the World to Be Erected in Detroit

Plans for what is expected to be the tallest building in the world—57 stories—to cost $15,000,000, and capable of accommodating 10,000 people, have just been completed by a Detroit architect. Options have been obtained on a $5,000,000 site, bounded by Michigan and Cass avenues, Lafayette boulevard and Abbot streets, and tentative tenders have been called for.

The building as planned will be a city in itself, with a postoffice, police station, arena seating 16,000 people, a quarter-mile track, and an auditorium with 30,000 capacity.

The plans call for a 27-story hotel and 57 stories of offices, running up into a tower 808 feet high, as compared with the 789 feet of the Woolworth building, New York. Two airplane landings 50 feet wide by 620 feet long will be located on the roof. According to the plans there will be 4,312 rooms. The foundations will be carried to bed-rock. In the basement will be located 504 display rooms. There will be seven banquet halls, two small convention halls, one serve-self, one dining room, two ball rooms, and a hospital on the second floor of the building.

Returned Soldier Tells of Terrible Experience at Ruhleben Camp

W. E. Collins, a returned prisoner at Ruhleben, gives the following account of the condition of the British civilians interned there: "One man," he states, "whom I knew well, who has been 13 weeks in a Berlin prison, and whom I watched becoming insane, has died in a London asylum. Another man had been for seven months in a German prison, and others I often spoke with, have been in five or six different jails in solitary confinement and, from four o'clock in the afternoon until eight o'clock the next morning, in total darkness. My own cell was three faces by two. We were given bread and water and treated like criminals. The sanitary arrangements were too awful for description. The exercise allowed amounted to 20 minutes per day in a yard 17 paces by 13.

Describing the partings between the interned men and their wives and families, Mr. Collins continued: "Eleven of us Liverpool cotton men happened to be living in Bremen at that time. We were taken in Black Maria to the railway station, given over to the military, and told that we had to obey orders or be shot. A certain lieutenant had told his men that if he had his way he would shoot the lot of us and give our wives and womenfolk over to the soldiery. On the way to Ruhleben we had nothing to eat or drink, and on arriving there we wished ourselves back in prison, for we had to lie night after night on wet straw sacks on the stone floor, under the eaves of the barracks. Those who lay close to the windows had their clothes frozen to the windows. Then we were removed to 'stable blocks,' full of rats and mice, and to horse boxes, with four sacks to five men, bullied about all the time by brutal soldiers. It was awful to see the crippled men carried about in the camp. One day I saw a man cut his throat. Sometimes we had to line up 17 times a day in slush, rain and cold. And the awful food! We were allowed one slice of bread every 24 hours, and what we had at dinner time was not worth eating. The coffee was made from acorns. I have been back some time now, but I never feel like a released man."

Hopeless

There is in the employ of a Brooklyn woman an Irish cook who has managed to break nearly every variety of article that the household contains. The mistress' patience reached its limit recently when she discovered that the cook had broken the thermometer that hung in the dining-room.

"Well, well," sighed the lady of the house, in a resigned way, "you've managed to break even the thermometer, haven't you?"

Whereupon, in a tone equally resigned, the cook said: "Yis, mum; and now we'll have to take the weather just as it comes, won't we?"—Argonaut.

The Best Habit In The World is the habit of health. The way to get it is to train your bowels, through the liver, to act naturally, at a fixed time, every day.

Take one pill regularly (more only if necessary) until you succeed. Then you can stop taking them, without trouble or annoyance.

This has been the good-health rule for 50 years.

The Horse's Education

Special Training Is Advisable For Farm Horses

It is not too much to say that the majority of farmers pay little or no attention to the education of the horses which they breed. The young animal is given scant attention until the age of two and a half or three years, at which time he is usually placed in harness. When he learns to behave himself, to go forward and to stop at certain signals, he is considered as having graduated, and so is said to be properly trained. Some horses being gifted with more intelligence than their masters, manage to pick up an education just as some men do. And it is these horses that know something besides going forward or backward and obeying the pull on the mouth, that get the biggest share of the farm work. These are the ones which the farm hands prefer to use, and the ones most profitable to work. This for the reason that they need not be totally regarded as machines, but rather may be depended upon themselves to exercise a certain amount of intelligence in the work they are doing. I know sections where prospective farmer buyers will hardly look at a horse not trained to voice control for farm purposes. And why not? Cow ponies, cavalry horses, etc., were taught to obey a word or a touch of knee or even a swing of the rider's body. This is an age of special training in men and women, and why not of reasonable training of farm horses? Yet farmers and breeders seem satisfied if they persuade a horse to wear harness and draw a load, even if they must swing full weight on a line to pull him around a corner and back into the furrow or off a corn row or tomato hill, or out of the way of a three-ton truck.

Possession is nine points of the law and the attorney's fee is the tenth.

YES! MAGICALLY! CORNS LIFT OUT WITH FINGERS.

You say to the drug store man, "Give me a small bottle of freezezone." This will cost very little but will positively remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet.

A few drops of this new ether compound applied directly upon a tender, aching corn relieves the soreness instantly, and soon the entire corn or callus, root and all, dries up and can be lifted off with the fingers.

This new way to rid one's feet of corns was introduced by a Cincinnati man, who says that freezezone dries the corn or callus without irritating the surrounding skin.

Don't let father die of infection or lockjaw from whitening his corns, but clip this out and make him try it.

If your druggist hasn't any freezezone tell him to order a small bottle from his wholesale drug house for you.

A Cure for Rheumatism.—A painful and persistent form of rheumatism is caused by impurities in the blood, the result of defective action of the liver and kidneys. The blood becomes tainted by the introduction of uric acid, which causes much pain in the tissues and in the joints. Parkelee's Vegetable Pills are known to have effected many remarkable cures, and their use is strongly recommended. A trial of them will convince anyone of their value.

Dogs and Cats in War

Are Put to Good Use in Ridding the Camps of Rodents

Hundreds of cats and thousands of dogs are now serving their countries at the front. The canines have a wide range of duties, according to breed and size. Sledge dogs are used in transporting supplies over the mountains in the winter months, and big Belgian dogs also draw machine guns. The Red Cross has hundreds of four-footed assistants who search out the wounded in the "No Man's Land" between the trenches. Terriers and spaniels also have important duties to perform in freeing the trenches of the swarms of rats which infest them. The cats "do their bit" in the various storehouses back of the front, where the mice would work great damage if left alone.

The demand for cats as mouse catchers and for dogs as rat catchers is greater than the supply. From all over France cats have been shipped to the front to conserve the precious food supply from the ravages of rodents. Country cats are preferred to city cats for this purpose. In the early months of trench warfare the trenches swarmed with rats, but this problem has now been solved by the French military authorities. They announced that each pilou fetching a rat catching dog to the trenches would be rewarded by two days' additional leave of absence on his next permission. Since that order was issued every soldier who visits his home makes it a point to find a terrier or a spaniel to take back to the front with him. Each owner of such a dog is also entitled to a small sum for each rat killed and the fortunate owner of an ambitious canine is greatly envied by his comrades.

The dogs and cats who serve their country in this way are favorites with the soldiers, and they find life easy and agreeable, with lots of sport and plenty to eat. Fido has only to bark or Puss to mew to induce the pilous to divide up their food.

The Bible an Impregnable Fortress

If Our Daily Lives Were Entirely Moulded in Accordance With God's Word

"A few more years will witness the passing of the Bible out of existence."

A greater falsehood was never uttered. However, the words above quoted recently appeared in a New York publication, which is endeavoring to dispel the venomous epithets of infidelity over the North American continent.

Let us get in, so to speak, the Bible. That triumph will continue until a glorious event when all nations, kindreds and tongues shall bow before God. For centuries the forces of infidelity have hurled every possible stigma against the Bible. It would be interesting to learn from those who desire annihilation of the Scriptures, some details of the proposed ways and means for the betterment of the earth's inhabitants. Also, the particulars of any agency whereby humanity receives benefit, that is not founded upon Biblical text. Has it ever occurred to your thoughts what intense improvement would accrue to the world if people's daily lives were entirely moulded in accordance with God's word?

The whole artillery of atheist and infidel cannot efface one letter from the Bible.

When we realize what the power of the Bible really is, we can but hope the day is not distant when from remote corners of the earth it shall be said by no person: "The Bible has not been given to me."—J.D.A. Evans.

Russian Cossack's Were Roasted Alive by the Germans

Among the almost un-reportable horrors that have been brought to light by the Commission appointed to enquire into the treatment of Russian soldiers and civilians by the German military authorities is a case of a Russian who refused to give away his regiment's movements. The man, after being grossly insulted, was then conducted to a torture chamber, where he was stripped naked and placed upon a table. The officer then attached an electric needle connected with a dynamo to the Cossack's wounded leg, and applied the torture for half an hour. The victim heroically refused to give any information, and the torturing process was repeated on the two following days. This proving unsuccessful, the officer applied a red hot iron and rubbed it over the Cossack's feet. In spite of his frightful sufferings the latter managed to escape. During an advance on the Russian left flank, the Germans placed a company of Russian infantry prisoners in a boat, took them out one by one, and after bayonets, threw them into the river. During a village fight the Germans captured 30 Russian soldiers, and imprisoned them in a house for three days without food or medical assistance. When the Germans withdrew, they set fire to the house after placing cartridges in the roof. Ten managed to crawl out but the rest were burnt to death.

'The Cow Bill'

The Live Stock Encouragement Act which was passed at the recent session of the Alberta Legislature, commonly known as "The Cow Bill," is now in operation, and applications are being received at the Department of Agriculture for loans under this Act. The Act provides that any five or more farmers may avail themselves of its provisions by joining together for that purpose. These men may borrow up to $500 each. The money is loaned to them for a period of five years at 6 per cent interest. The farmer receives the full $500 and has nothing to pay but $30 interest once a year until the end of five years. The only expense in connection with the loan is a fee of $1 for every $100 borrowed. There is no further expense in connection with cattle mortgages or the registration of the same as the Live Stock Commissioner in the Department of Agriculture holds the cattle in security for the loan by means of a government brand. A certain amount of supervision is made over the purchase of the cattle, or rather, the farmer is given whatever assistance he may require in the purchase of his cows.

The money must be used exclusively in the purchase of cows or heifers, except in case a number of members of an association wish to purchase a pure-bred bull to be used by them as an association, and then 10 per cent of their money may be used for that purpose. The purchaser of livestock under this Act must retain the progeny of the cows or heifers so purchased until the note is paid, except that he can sell the steers when they are two years old and use the proceeds in connection with his farming business. None of the original cows or heifers, or cows and heifers bred from them, can be sold without the written consent of the Live Stock Commissioner. This consent, of course, will be given in case a farmer should require to sell any of them on account of their being non-breeders or for any other reason, replacing those sold with other cows or heifers. In this way the live stock loans will practically all be secure after the first crop of calves has been raised, so that there will be a comparatively small amount of risk either for the Government or for any individual member of an association.

In order to avail themselves of this loan, five farmers are asked to join together, signing joint and several notes for the money, so that in case of any man wilfully neglecting his stock there will be some interested person in the shape of another member of the syndicate to notify the Live Stock Commissioner and he, under the provisions of this Act, can take charge of the stock so neglected, and see that the other members of the syndicate as well as the government are protected against loss.

Provision is also made in the Act for the Live Stock Commissioner to proceed against the one man who so neglects his stock and compel him to pay whatever loss there is without involving the other members of the syndicate in a law-suit, the idea being to work out, as simply as possible, a system by which men can borrow money at a low rate of interest for the purchase of live stock, and still have reasonable protection for the Treasury of the Province of Alberta, which guarantees these loans, and thus materially reduces the rate of interest.

Already a number of applications have been received from associations and the Live Stock Commissioner is now prepared to take the matter up with any farmers who are interested in the Act. Write the Department of Agriculture, Edmonton, for information, for application and copies.
